Live in Music City is Danny Salazar's first, full-length release featuring nine vibrant latin roots songs recorded live at Nashville's 12th & Porter, and four studio tracks that crossover into a fresh, latin/reggae-inspired pop with an urban twist (the suggested studio tracks are in English and the rest of the songs are in Spanish). Over the last four years, Danny Salazar & Trova Urbana have developed a strong, yet diverse following in Nashville, with a live show that delivers infectiously danceable rhythms and vitality.

"Breathless melodies over insanely catchy rhythms."
— The Nashville Scene

More About Danny Salazar & Trova Urbana:

In 2007 Danny formed Trova Urbana, a live band made up of some of Nashville's top Latin players that features Danny on vocals and nylon string guitar at the core. Danny writes all of the songs for Trova Urbana, combining distinctive elements of Latin music, including a variety of rhythms found in Mexico, South America and the Caribbean. Danny writes songs in both English and Spanish, merging a simple, yet effective resonance of both languages.

The name Trova Urbana comes from the word Troubador (a composer and performer of songs in particular styles during the Middle Ages in Europe), and the word Urbana means urban. Danny says the name first came to him when a friend invited him to a party and told him to "bring his trova urbana" referring to how Danny would carry his guitar around the city.
